

HOW TO BEAT WRITING PROCRASTINATION & WRITE YOUR RESEARCH PAPER

1 Create a Research Paper Schedule

List all the writing phases and tasks you need to do to finish your research paper. Divide up the project into chunks, and determine how much time it will take to accomplish a phase. Set up a times for when you'll focus on your paper and schedule your days in a calendar.

2 Use a Timer to Focus

Use a timer and schedule work time and break time. When you use a timer, you concentrate on your work and block everything else out. Set the timer for a fixed number of minutes in which you'll work, and then a fixed number of minutes for a break.

This creates a cycle. Keep going through the cycle until you complete your work for the day.

3 Reward Yourself When You Complete a Task

Give yourself little rewards for each part of the process and a bigger reward for completing it. A word of caution, rewards work on a temporary basis, as you complete something challenging. Don't rely on rewards as the only motivator for getting something done.

4 Envision Completing an Exceptional Research Paper.

Imagine what it will be like when you finish your research paper. Visualize how you will feel, what the paper will look like, what you'll hear and sense around you. Take time each day to conjure up that positive vision. It will inspire you when things seem difficult.

5 Create a Writing Habit That is Fun

When you build up a writing habit you decrease the amount of resistance you have toward writing. Decide on a trigger that will start your writing, write on any topic you like for 10 minutes without stopping. Reward yourself when you finish. Do this for 30 days.

6 Study and Practice Academic Writing Skills Regularly

You need to gain confidence in the different writing skills you think need improvement. There are key elements you want to develop in your writing like: Summarizing, paraphrasing and quoting, analyzing evidence, and writing a draft with solid evidence and support for your thesis statement.

7 Get Feedback on Writing Skills

Get advice and comments on your academic writing. Feedback is how you know what you've done well and how to keep doing it well. You also learn how to improve your work. Seek feedback from people who understand how to do academic research and writing.
