

HOW TO WRITE AN UNKNOWN LAB REPORT IN MICROBIOLOGY

GENERAL

Unknown reports in microbiology are written in scientific format. Scientific writing is written differently from other types of writing. The results of the exercise or experiment are what are being showcased, not the writing. The purpose of scientific writing is not to entertain, but to inform. The writing should be simple and easy to understand. There is a specific style that must be followed when writing scientific reports.

Scientific writing is typically written in the passive voice. The pronouns "I", "We" and "They" are not typically used. For example, instead of writing "I used a TSA agar plate to isolate my unknown," it is customary to write, "A trypticase soy agar (TSA) plate was used to isolate the unknown."

It is also customary to write in the past tense for most of the report. This includes the introduction, the summary, the description of the materials and methods and the results. The present tense is reserved for the conclusions about the results. See the examples given below.

Some other general rules that should be followed are:

Microbial nomenclature: The name of the bacterium should be written and spelled correctly. The name should be italicized or underlined. Italicized is preferred. For example, Staphylococcus aureus. The genus is capitalized but the species is not. After the full genus name is given in the paper, it can be written as S. aureus, but still italicized. This is as long as there is no other genera in the paper that starts with the same letter.

PARTS TO THE UNKNOWN LAB REPORT

(Note: Other than the title page, the pages of the report must be numbered)

TITLE PAGE

There should always be a title page and should include the following information:

EXAMPLE OF TITLE PAGE

Title should be centered and at the top or in the middle of the page

UNKNOWN LAB REPORT # 1

This information should be centered and at the bottom part of the title page:

UNKNOWN LETTER (OR NUMBER)

YOUR NAME
DATE (the due date)
LAB INSTRUCTOR'S NAME
COURSE NAME
SEMESTER / YEAR
SECTION NUMBER
