

Regrind valve levers that show excessive wear or hammering at the ends (3) which contact the valves. Remove only enough material to give an even face on the end of the valve lever and take care that the rounding is maintained lengthways to assure perfect gliding action on the valve stem. Be sure that the surface is not ground out of line with the valve lever shaft in the lateral plane as this would place side thrust on the valve stem, thereby causing out-of-round wear on the valve guides.

Where appropriate grinding facilities for valve levers are not available it is advisable to install new valve levers.

Inspect contact face of the valve adjusting screw (6) for hammering.

Replace worn screws with new ones.

Check expansion plugs on both ends of the lever shaft for leakage and replace plugs, if necessary, using liquid sealer. Check valve lever springs against specifications and replace with new ones if signs of corrosion, chafing or fatigue begin to show.

Inspect valve housing cover for cracks and distortion.

Reassembly and Installation

Reassemble the valve lever shaft in accordance with Illust. 8a; commencing with front bracket (1). Oil all parts slightly before reassembly.

Punch mark (3) Illust. 8 of the shaft end must be in line with clamping slot (4). This will ensure that oil passages in brackets and shaft correspond.
