

The Digestive System

What is the digestive system?

The digestive system, or gastrointestinal tract, is a complex of organs in which foods, beverages, and other nutrients are broken down into smaller molecules that can be absorbed into the bloodstream. The process begins in the mouth, where food is chewed and mixed with saliva. The resulting bolus is then swallowed and moves down the esophagus into the stomach. In the stomach, food is further broken down and mixed with gastric juices. The resulting chyme then moves into the small intestine, where most of the digestion and absorption of nutrients occurs. The small intestine is divided into three parts: the duodenum, the jejunum, and the ileum. The ileum ends at the ileocecal junction, where the chyme enters the large intestine. The large intestine is divided into the cecum, the ascending colon, the transverse colon, the descending colon, and the sigmoid colon. The sigmoid colon leads to the rectum and anal canal, where the waste is eliminated from the body.

Liver, pancreas & gallbladder

The liver, pancreas, and gallbladder are accessory organs of the digestive system. The liver is the largest organ in the body and is responsible for producing bile, which is used to emulsify fats in the small intestine. The pancreas is a gland that produces pancreatic juice, which contains enzymes that help to break down carbohydrates, proteins, and fats. The gallbladder is a small sac that stores bile until it is needed for digestion.

Layers of large intestine

Large intestine

The large intestine is the final part of the digestive system. It is responsible for absorbing water and electrolytes from the remaining indigestible food matter. The large intestine is divided into the cecum, the ascending colon, the transverse colon, the descending colon, and the sigmoid colon. The sigmoid colon leads to the rectum and anal canal.

Peristaltic action

Peristaltic action is the process by which the digestive system moves food through the tract. It is a series of involuntary, rhythmic, wave-like muscle contractions that push the contents of the digestive tract along. The process begins in the esophagus and continues through the stomach and small intestine. The large intestine also uses peristaltic action to move waste towards the rectum.

The mouth & salivary glands

The mouth is the starting point of the digestive system. It is where food is broken down into smaller pieces and mixed with saliva. The salivary glands, which include the parotid, sublingual, and submandibular glands, produce saliva. Saliva contains the enzyme amylase, which begins the digestion of carbohydrates. The mouth also contains taste buds, which help to detect the flavor of food.

The stomach

The stomach is a muscular organ that is responsible for breaking down food into smaller pieces and mixing it with gastric juices. The stomach is divided into four parts: the cardia, the fundus, the body, and the pylorus. The cardia is the opening of the stomach into the esophagus. The fundus is the upper part of the stomach. The body is the middle part of the stomach. The pylorus is the lower part of the stomach, which leads to the small intestine.

Small intestine

The small intestine is the longest part of the digestive system. It is responsible for the majority of the digestion and absorption of nutrients. The small intestine is divided into three parts: the duodenum, the jejunum, and the ileum. The duodenum is the first part of the small intestine, where it receives chyme from the stomach. The jejunum is the middle part of the small intestine. The ileum is the last part of the small intestine, which ends at the ileocecal junction.

Absorption

Absorption is the process by which nutrients are taken up by the cells of the digestive tract. It occurs primarily in the small intestine, where the villi increase the surface area for absorption. The nutrients are then transported to the liver through the portal vein. The large intestine is responsible for absorbing water and electrolytes from the remaining indigestible food matter.
