

Managerial Accounting Midterm 1 Review

Chapter 1: Managerial Accounting

Managerial Accounting Basics:

Managerial Accounting: a field of accounting that provides records and financial information for managers and other stakeholders

Differences Between Financial and Managerial Accounting

Features	Financial Accounting	Managerial Accounting
Primary users / objectives	External users: shareholders, creditors, governments	Internal users: internal management
Types and frequency of reports	Standardized and periodic	Internal reporting as frequently as needed
Primary accounts	General ledger	Special purpose financial statements
Accounting systems	Formalized procedures or strictly highly regulated (standards) is critical to ensure every accounting and reporting activity is properly performed	Formalized aspects of the business that standard financial statements do not account for such as sales, manufacturing, and services
Accounting periods	Required by GAAP (generally 12-month accounting periods)	Not standardized either

Management Functions and Organizational Structures:

Staff/Division: the group of officials started by the departmental organization or business organization to facilitate operating activities, staff officials coordinate with management

Administrative Officer (AO): the one person official who has overall responsibility for managing the business; he or she manages several other responsibilities besides the general affairs

Line Position: jobs that are directly involved in a company's main business providing valuable services

Staff Position: official support the staffs of line positions

Chief Financial Officer (CFO): the one person official who is responsible for all company's accounting and finance issues

Controller: the financial officer who is responsible for a company's accounting records, system of internal controls, and preparation of financial statements, tax returns, and internal audits
