

Memories sometimes last forever, good and bad. Your first steps can live with you parents forever, you and your families arguments, hurtful words, hurtful thoughts, and hurtful memories just hurt our hearts. Which is why things that unite us are more influential because no matter how much something may hurt you its always good to come unite with your family. People are much more united in their beliefs and values than media. This is why the things that unite us are more influential than the things that divide us.

Loyalty and love can influence further memories and help with motivation. Studies show when kids are loved and believe someone is actually showing loyalty and believe in them they're more likely to succeed. Kids who feel loved tend to feel more motivated and more proud when doing good things which is uniting families. Kids who feel safe tend to become more comfortable they like this feeling because they feel as if they will always have some type of hold or something to fall back on in case something goes wrong. According to www.ohchr.org, "Akaka believes shared human values can turn this narrative around. "We all deserve to have a safe space to live," she says. "We all deserve to live without fear, no matter where we're from or how we grew up. We all deserve to have systems in place that work for us and with us rather than against us." meaning that human values depend on feeling safe which ties into loyalty.

Others may say the things that divide us are more influential than the things that unite us. They may think this because the things that divide us often teaches us a lesson in the end. Although this is oftenly true this still is hurtful because sometimes you may feel like you have noone on your side and as if the whole world is against you. This ties in with loyalty you will often feel like noone is loyal to you. Like when people get into arguments with their partners for example you feel betrayed because you never know what they are telling other people and how other people may look at you because of what your partner told them.

In Conclusion, the things that unite us are more influential than the things that divide us. Though things that divide us often teach us a lesson, things that unite us make us stronger.
