

Section 1: Why? Population Change is Here
Read the passage below and answer the questions that follow.

Over time, the composition of populations change because birth rates, mortality rates (or how to die) and migration rates are different, regardless of time. This is population geography. Birth rates (the average number of births) and mortality rates (the average number of deaths) at population level are different over time. If mortality is higher, populations will decrease, and death is more likely than birth. If the number of births is greater than the number of deaths, the population will increase and the population will grow.

Write the letter of the correct phrase that best describes the description.

- a. population growth rate b. population growth rate c. zero growth rate
- _____ 1. The average number of deaths is greater than the average number of births.
- _____ 2. The average number of deaths is the same as the average number of births.
- _____ 3. The average number of births is greater than the average number of deaths.
- a. Growth rate is the rate of population change.
- b. Population growth rate, also called a population growth rate, is the difference between the number of births and the number of deaths in a population. The rate is zero, which is the zero growth rate.
- _____ Explain your answer.

Complete the sentences below with the correct population growth rate. Write "G" for the rate to be born at the first stage, "D" for the rate to be born at the second stage, and so on.

- _____ a. The population rate increases as time goes on.
- _____ b. The population rate is decreasing as time goes on.
- _____ c. The population rate is stable, independent of time.
