Teaching for Equity in Complex Times

Jamy Stillman, Lauren Anderson, 2017 In schools serving high concentrations of bilingual learners it can be especially challenging for teachers to maintain commitments to equity minded instruction while meeting the demands of new educational policies including national standards This book details how one school integrated equity pedagogy into a standards based curriculum and produced exemplary levels of achievement As the authors illustrate however the school s dual commitment to bilingual education and standards based reform engendered numerous complex tensions Specifically the authors describe teachers attempts to balance demands for rigor and content coverage within their high performing school and with their diverse student population They identify specific tensions that emerged around the following issues the degree of academic struggle that is generative for student learning and the point at which such struggle becomes counterproductive the holding of high expectations for all learners and the provision of differentiated student centered learning experiences the CCSS emphasis on engaging students around more complex text and the contested determination of what constitutes complexity in text and in teaching the influence of high stakes accountability on school norms and practices including teachers interpretations and enactment of new national standards the performance pressures placed on teachers in today s educational policy context This book offers welcome guidance on dialogical teaching to socially committed teachers and teacher educators Linda Valli University of Maryland A must read for those interested in transformative teacher learning Kris D Gutierrez Carol Liu Professor GSE University of California Berkeley Negotiating Learning and Identity in Higher Education Bongji Bangeni, Rochelle Kapp, 2017-09-21 While access to higher education has increased globally student retention has become a major challenge This book analyses various aspects of the learning pathways of black students from a range of disciplinary backgrounds at a relatively elite English medium historically white South African university The students are part of a generation of young black people who have grown up in the new South Africa and are gaining access to higher education in unprecedented numbers Based on two longitudinal case studies Negotiating Learning and Identity in Higher Education makes a contribution to the debates about how to facilitate access and graduation of working class students The longitudinal perspective enabled the students participating in the research to reflect on their transition to university and the stumbling blocks they encountered in their senior years The contributors show that the school to university transition is not linear or universal Students had to negotiate multiple transitions at various times and both resist and absorb institutional disciplinary and home discourses The book describes and analyses the students ambivalence as they straddle often conflicting discourses within their disciplines within the institution between home and the institution and as they occupy multiple subject positions that are related to the boundaries of place and time Each chapter also describes the ways in which the institution supports and or hinders students progress explores the implications of its findings for models of support and addresses the issue of what constitutes meaningful access to institutional and disciplinary discourses Content-Based Curriculum for Advanced Learners Joyce VanTassel-Baska, Catherine A.
