Explore (20-25 min)

How is the base-ten counting system different from the system used for telling time?

Activity

Have students compare one small cube to one long.

- How is the long related to the small cube? Possible answer: 10 small cubes make up 1 long. Have students compare the long to the flat.
- How is the flat related to the long? Possible answer: 10 longs make up 1 flat. Have students compare the flat and large cube.
- How is the large cube related to the flat? Possible answer: 10 flats make up 1 large cube.
- How do you think the next base-ten block would relate to the large cube? Possible answer: I will need 10 large cubes to make up 1 of these models. What will be the value of this block? 10,000.
- What words might you use to describe this pattern in the blocks? Possible answer: each model is ten times the size of the model before it.

Math Talk: What other type of base-ten block could you use to model 100,000?

- What would the shape of the model be? How do you know? Possible answer: flat; a pattern in the shapes of the models is cube, long, flat, so longs are used to make a flat.
- How many ten thousands longs would you use? Why? Possible answer: 10; each model is 10 times the size of the previous model.

Value of a Digit

Discuss the concept that in a place-value chart, each place represents a value ten times the value of the place to its right.

- How is a place-value chart similar to the models of small cubes, longs, flats, and large cubes? Possible answer: a ten, or long, is 10 times the value of a one, or small cube. A hundred, or flat, is 10 times the value of a ten, or long. A thousand, or large cube, is 10 times the value of a hundred, or flat.
- What is the name of the place value the digit 8 is in? hundred thousands.
- How can you find the value of the digit 8? Possible answer: since the 8 is in the hundred thousands place, the value is 8 hundred thousands.

Have students record the value of the digit 8 as a number: 800,000. The next example involves identifying and comparing the values of digits in two numbers, using a place-value chart.

Math Talk: Describe how you can compare the values of the digits without drawing a model.
