

Concrete Problems for Teachers

Many more mathematical statements are produced by the processes of being given an idea which is new with respect to previous mathematical statements than by the process of being given a statement.

Children and adults, that are familiar to your work, will naturally find it more easy to learn from a process than from a statement. About children, especially, however, it is not clear how to give a process. It is not clear how to give a process in a way which is not a statement.
