

Answering Document-Based Questions

In one of your classes, perhaps a history class, you may need to respond to a document-based question (DBQ), often as part of an exam. A DBQ requires that you analyze a series of related documents such as excerpts from books, magazines, Web pages, diaries, or other text sources. You might also encounter visual documents such as photographs, maps, editorial cartoons, tables, graphs, or time lines.

In most cases, a DBQ asks you to write an essay, drawing information from the documents as well as from material you have previously learned. Sometimes you may need to glean information from one or more documents and present it in a different form, perhaps as a graph or a table. In either situation, you must work quickly and accurately because you have a limited time to form your response.

WHAT'S AHEAD

This chapter will help you respond to document-based questions. It offers responding tips plus a sample DBQ with corresponding documents and response essay.

"It is better to debate a question without settling it than to settle a question without debating it."

How To Answer Document Based Questions:

Document-Based Questions for Reading Comprehension and Critical Thinking Debra Housel,2007-02-12 Give students practice in answering the types of questions used in standardized tests High interest stories primary source documents and comprehension questions encourage the use of higher order thinking skills A Handbook for History Teachers James A. Duthie,2012-09-28 History is not a mere chronicle of facts but a dialogue between competing interpretations of the past it should be taught as such Teaching history in this way makes it both intellectually demanding and more interesting while at the same time helps students acquire the knowledge and skills necessary to become functioning citizens in a democracy The opening chapters provide the rationale for the study of history its epistemological basis and the logic of the discipline The bulk of the book deals with practical ways to help students acquire process and apply information In particular it addresses the specific thinking skills required by the discipline with many effective techniques for helping students to master them The implications of this approach for teacher evaluation of student work are also addressed

Building Literacy in Social Studies Donna Ogle,Ron Klemp,2007-04-15 Preparing students to be active informed literate citizens is one of the primary functions of public schools But how can students become engaged citizens if they can't read let alone understand their social studies texts What can educators and social studies teachers in particular do to help students develop the knowledge skills and motivation to become engaged in civic life Building Literacy in Social Studies addresses this question by presenting both the underlying concepts and the research based techniques that teachers can use to engage students and build the skills they need to become successful readers critical thinkers and active citizens The authors provide targeted strategies including teaching models graphic organizers and step by step instructions for activities such as Building vocabulary Developing textbook literacy skills Interpreting primary and secondary sources Applying critical thinking skills to newspapers and magazines and Evaluating Internet sources Readers will also learn how to organize classrooms into models of democracy by creating learning communities that support literacy instruction distribute authority encourage cooperation and increase accountability among students Realistic scenarios depict a typical social studies teacher's experience before and after implementing the strategies in the classroom showing their potential to make a significant difference in how students respond to instruction By making literacy strategies a vital part of content area instruction teachers not only help students better understand their schoolwork but also open students eyes to the power that informed and engaged people have to change the world CliffsNotes AP European History Cram Plan Malcolm Mafi,2017-11-14
