Conventions leading to the adoption of supplementary standards by the 103rd International Labour Conference in June 2014
The power of normative pressure against those who still use or condone the use of forced labour is essential and national legislation needs to be strengthened to combat forced labour and penalties against those who profit from it need to be strictly enforced However a better understanding of the socio economic root causes and a new assessment of the profits of forced labour are equally important to bringing about long term change This report highlights how forced labour which in the private economy generates US 150 billion in illegal profits per year about three times more than previously estimated thrives in the incubator of poverty and vulnerability low levels of education and literacy migration and other factors The evidence presented illustrates the need for stronger measures of prevention and protection as well as for enhanced law enforcement as the basic responses to forced labour At the same time the report offers new knowledge of the determinants of forced labour including a range of figures that break down profits by area of forced labour and by region This can help us develop policies and programmes not only to stop forced labour where it exists but to prevent it before it occurs Forthcoming Books Rose Arny,2001 Canadian Journal of Forest Research ,2016 Economics and Finance in Indonesia ,2005 JMR, Journal of Marketing Research ,2000
