

Types of Controls

Controls	Controls
Procedures that concern the evaluation of performance and the assessment of the degree of compliance with company policies and public law.	Procedures designed to safeguard the assets and ensure the accounting records contain reliable information.

Activity 2:

What is the purpose of internal controls?

How do we verify a company's cash balance?

At any given point in time, a company can look at its accounting records to see the cash balance. However, the balance in the cash account is not always the same as the balance for cash on the balance sheet. In many cases, we need to reconcile these two systems and adjust our accounting records.

There are two approaches we can use to reconcile our cash balance.

1. Start with the accounting records and adjust the cash balance in our accounting system for items recorded by the bank but not captured yet in the accounting system. The adjustments require entries to update our accounting system.
2. Start with the bank statement and adjust the balance reported on the bank statement for items recorded in the accounting system that have not yet been captured by the bank. These adjustments do not result in journal entries.
