TNT is a limited partnership entity as it has more than one person having an ownership interest in the business. Each of the limited partners is entitled to TNT's income, expense and liability in direct proportion to his ownership percentage. Depreciation is also an expense that is shown in the income statement of the limited partnership. In combination with other expenses incurred by TNT, this is also subtracted from the income of TNT to arrive at the business's net income or loss.

Straight-Line Depreciation

Although there are several methods of depreciation which can be used by a limited partnership such as TNT, the partners have decided to use Straight-line Depreciation Method, the most common method of calculating the depreciation expense. TNT uses this method on the basis of the economic life of an asset which is established by the IRS.
