

	QUESTIONS/STATEMENTS	FACTUAL ANSWERS
1.	If the Firearm Certificate system doesn't stop mass murderers, like Ryan ('87, Hungerford, UK), Hamilton ('96, Dunblane, UK), Steinhilber ('02, Erfurt, Germany), or Bryant ('96, Port Arthur, Australia), surely the guns themselves should be banned?	No Certificate System, or ban, has ever stopped criminals from getting guns. Their principal effects are to disarm law-abiding victims, absorb police resources and restrict or destroy sport shooting. In any event, alternatives such as petrol, paraffin or simple bombs can easily be used and may well lead to even more deaths. Please see item E overleaf.
2.	Can you guarantee a mass shooting won't happen again?	No. But the latest research (e.g. John Lott, jr., 1996 & later) indicates that the only policy that actually reduces both the frequency and severity of such events – and reduces them very substantially indeed – is to allow the public to carry guns for self-defence. Mass shootings typically happen in "gun-free" zones.
3.	How can you compare a sport with a child's life?	You can't. But there is no evidence to suggest that restricting or banning the sport will save even 1 life. On the contrary, a '93 US Dept of Justice Report showed that boys with legal guns were less likely to commit crime than non-owners and hugely less likely than boys with illegal guns.
4.	Large calibre pistols are not in the Olympics, so they're not needed for sport and should be banned.	There are far more sports outside the Olympics than inside. Large calibre pistols are much more popular than small and there are, in fact, many more competitions for them at all levels, right up to World Championships.
5.	America has no gun control and has very high murder and crime levels. We have nothing to learn from them.	Actually America has thousands of gun laws. Their laws warrant serious study because of their wide variety, from extremely strict to non-existent. This allows thorough comparative research & the results are both clear & consistent: strict gun laws produce more crime than light ones. Strict gun laws don't disarm criminals, only victims. Most violent crime rates are lower in America than UK. Even the murder rate has been declining for many years, as more States allow the public to carry guns for self-defence. As English gun laws have become more onerous, violent crime rates, including murder, are rising.
6.	Guns and ammunition should be held at Clubs or in Armouries.	The cost of such places would be very high. They would become prime targets for thieves and terrorists. Operating such clubs would be very bureaucratic and travelling to competitions even worse. Club officials, who would not be trusted to have their guns/ammunition at home, would have to be trusted to operate the system. The costs and inconvenience would drive people out of the sport, without any benefits at all.
7.	A balance has to be struck between freedom of the individual to possess guns and public safety; and the present balance is wrong.	This is a false analogy. There is no such balance. In other words, civilian gun ownership is on the same side of the equation as public safety. So widespread public gun ownership increases public safety, while strict gun control reduces public safety. Please see Question 2.
8.	Why do you need guns anyway?	Gamekeepers, stalkers, farmers, gun designers and manufacturers, bodyguards, etc., need guns as part of their work. Military and police personnel often wish to improve their skills with tools on which their lives might depend, in their own time and at their own expense. Many people would like them as defensive insurance. A lot have them as a hobby, such as collecting, or a sport, like target shooting.
9.	Stricter gun laws will of course make society safer.	There is no factual evidence to support that. For example, England was a much safer place up to 1920 when there was effectively no gun control and defensive gun ownership was common, than it is now. And the stricter UK gun laws in 1968, '88 and '97 all resulted in much worse gun crime trends.
10.	Guns are dangerous.	Target shooting has an incredibly good safety record, probably the best of any activity sport and over 1,000 times better than, say, cricket or rugby.
11.	Guns are only made to kill people.	Not true. A great many guns are made especially for target shooting. In any event, it's surely what they are actually used for that counts. In addition, using a gun to stop crime, or to defend oneself, one's family, or one's community, from criminal violence, are brave, praiseworthy things to do, that a sensible society should encourage. It would have been a brave, difficult, but good thing, if a Dunblane teacher had shot Hamilton before he had killed those children in 1996.
12.	Guns are evil.	They aren't. They are tools; inanimate objects that are neither good nor evil. Only human activity is good or bad. And banning guns does not get rid of evil people.
