

MUSCULAR SYSTEM (ELAINE N. MARIEB)

The muscular system is an essential part of the human body, responsible for movement and the ability to maintain body posture. According to Elaine N. Marieb, the muscular system is composed of three types of muscles: skeletal muscles, smooth muscles and cardiac muscles.

Skeletal muscles are the muscles that are connected to bones and are used for voluntary movement of the body. These muscles are made up of muscle cells called muscle fibers and are controlled by the somatic nervous system. Skeletal muscles can contract and relax to allow movement and flexibility in the joints.

Smooth muscles are muscles found in internal organs such as the stomach, intestine and blood vessels. These muscles are responsible for involuntary movement and are controlled by the autonomic nervous system. Smooth muscles contract and relax to allow the movement of food through the digestive tract and to control blood flow in the blood vessels.

Cardiac muscles are the muscles that form the heart and are responsible for maintaining heart rhythm and blood circulation. These muscles are unique because they have the ability to contract in a rhythmic and coordinated manner without fatigue. The cardiac muscles are controlled by the autonomic nervous system and the electrical conduction system of the heart.

In addition to these three types of muscles, the muscular system also includes other tissues such as tendons, which connect muscles to bones, and connective tissue, which provides support and protection to muscles and other tissues.
