SIMULATION LAB
Introduction to MATLAB

The name MATLAB stands for Matrix Laboratory. MATLAB was written originally to provide easy access to matrix software developed in 1984 and is now considered as a standard tool at most universities and industries worldwide.

MATLAB is a high-performance language for technical computing. It integrates computation, visualization, and programming environment. Furthermore, MATLAB is a modern programming language environment; it has sophisticated data structures, contains built-in editing and debugging tools, and supports object-oriented programming. These factors make MATLAB an excellent tool for teaching and research.

MATLAB has many advantages compared to conventional computer languages (e.g., C, FORTRAN) for solving technical problems. MATLAB is an interactive system whose basic data element is an array that does not require dimensioning.

MATLAB integrates mathematical computing, visualization, and a powerful language to provide a flexible environment for technical computing. The open architecture makes it easy to use MATLAB and its companion products to explore data, create algorithms and create custom tools that provide early insights and competitive advantages. Known for its highly optimized matrix and vector calculations, MATLAB offers an intuitive language for expressing problems and their solutions both mathematically and visually. Typical uses include:

- Numeric computation and algorithm development.
- Symbolic computation (with the built-in Symbolic Math functions).
- Modeling, simulation and prototyping.
- Data analysis and signal processing.
- Engineering graphics and scientific visualization.

It has powerful built-in routines that enable a very wide variety of computations. It also has easy to use graphics commands that make the visualization of results immediately available. Special applications are collected in packages referred to as toolbox. There are toolboxes for signal processing, symbolic computation, control theory, simulation, optimization, and several other fields of applied science and engineering.
