This cycle is called the water cycle. The water cycle is a continuous process that involves evaporation, condensation, precipitation, and runoff. The water cycle is essential for life on Earth because it provides the water that all organisms need to survive. Evaporation is the process by which water changes from a liquid to a gas or vapor. This process occurs when the sun's heat causes water molecules to move faster and eventually escape into the air. Evaporation is a key part of the water cycle because it moves water from the surface of the ocean, lakes, and rivers into the atmosphere. Condensation is the process by which water vapor changes from a gas to a liquid. This process occurs when water vapor in the air cools and the water molecules slow down and clump together. Condensation is a key part of the water cycle because it forms clouds that can lead to precipitation. Precipitation is the process by which water falls from the sky as rain, snow, sleet, or hail. This process occurs when the water molecules in a cloud are heavy enough to fall to the ground. Precipitation is a key part of the water cycle because it returns water to the surface of the Earth. Runoff is the process by which water flows over the land or in rivers and streams. This process occurs when precipitation falls on the land and the water cannot infiltrate the ground. Runoff is a key part of the water cycle because it moves water from the land back to the ocean or lakes. Infiltration is the process by which water soaks into the ground. This process occurs when precipitation falls on the ground and the water seeps into the soil. Infiltration is a key part of the water cycle because it moves water from the surface of the ground into the ground. Groundwater is the water that is stored in the ground. This water is formed by infiltration and can be used by plants and animals. Groundwater is a key part of the water cycle because it provides a source of water that is not affected by evaporation or precipitation. Glaciers are large masses of ice that have formed over time. They are formed by the accumulation of snow and ice over many years. Glaciers are a key part of the water cycle because they store water for long periods of time. Icebergs are large chunks of ice that have broken off from glaciers. They float in the ocean and melt over time. Icebergs are a key part of the water cycle because they store water for long periods of time. Permafrost is the ground that is permanently frozen. It is found in the Arctic and Antarctic regions. Permafrost is a key part of the water cycle because it stores water for long periods of time. 7 Answer the correct option for each question. 1.
