

Laboratory Activity 42 — Student Laboratory Packet

Making Connections

A Laboratory Activity for the Course Enrollment

Measuring Connections

In this activity, students will measure the growth of a bacterial culture over time. They will use a spectrophotometer to measure the optical density of the culture at various time intervals. They will then use a graphing calculator to plot the data and determine the growth rate of the culture. They will also use a graphing calculator to determine the area under the curve of the growth curve.

Following and explaining connections to new or other math concepts by using your knowledge of the math activities in this laboratory is an important component of the course. The way in which you explain your connections will be evaluated. Use a clear, concise, and logical explanation.

In this part of the laboratory activity, you will plot a function and determine its area under the curve. Use a graphing calculator to determine the area under the curve.
