

A detailed diagram of a window's internal track mechanism. The window frame is shown in grey, with a white track running horizontally across the middle. A vertical metal rod is attached to the track, with various components including a pulley at the top, a bracket in the middle, and a roller at the bottom. A grey handle is attached to the right side of the track. The background shows a blurred view of green foliage through the window. A blue rectangular box highlights the text 'Window Track', with two black lines extending from the box to the track on either side.
