Essay Sample on Never Again: Ms. Gonzalez's Dramatic Speech After School Shooting Essay

After naming the victims, she gave a pause, perhaps to let the reality sink, at which time chants of "never again" could be heard.

Ms. Gonzalez was as dramatic as she was evident in her communication. Six minutes and 20 seconds after she went on stage, she made a pause in her speech, then repeated created a second account of the events of the shooting.

Gonzalez was present in the class where a shooter ended many lives on the unforgettable February 14.

The senior at the Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School in Parklands stood quite for four minutes and 26 seconds, staring at the crowd with her watery eyes gracing the screens across the country.

On a day when most people were expected to send love messages and gifts to their loved ones, a lone shooter chose to riddle the bodies of innocent lives with bullets, and Gonzalez could not be silent about it.

After the shooting, Ms. Gonzalez would be left in a panic, trying all they could to contact those with power to protect them.

However, her disappointment at the legislative and security inefficiencies emerged from part of her closing remarks.

"The shooter has ceased shooting, and will soon abandon his rifle, blend in with the students as they escape and walk free for an hour before arrest."

This statement captured the inefficiency of the security system within a country that allows just anyone to own a gun.

Gonzalez's message to those in attendance and those at home was a simple, "Fight for your lives before it's someone else's job."

The speech was a heart-rending moment on a day when demonstrations exhibited a display of emotions.

Similar rallies across the country involved speakers taking a stand against gun violence and committing to do all they could to stop it.

Considering that the majority of the speakers were young school-goers like Ms. Gonzalez, it is perhaps time to realize that anti-gun violence calls are a reality that requires a legislative response.
