Emotion and Aging: Recent Evidence from Brain and Behavior Natalie Ebner, Håkan Fischer, 2015-05-05 Emotions play a central role in every human life from the moment we are born until we die They prepare the body for action guide decisions and highlight what should be noticed and remembered Since emotions are central to daily functioning and well being it is important to understand the extent to which aging affects the perception of attention to memory for as well as experience and regulation of emotions An early scientific view of how people s emotions are affected by aging argued that aging led to a deterioration of emotional function This theory represented by for example Carl Jung 1875 1961 claimed that old age is a period of life when people feel an increased emotional sameness and less emotional energy According to this scientific view the aging emotional landscape was bleached barren and flattened Current psychological research however shows that emotion is rather a psychological domain that is relatively unaffected by the aging process or even improves with age in contrast to most cognitive functions For example even though there is evidence that aging is associated with deficits in emotion recognition various emotional functions seem to remain intact or become better with age such as the ability to regulate one's emotions or the extent of experiencing positive emotions However more research is needed to determine brain and behavior related quantitative and qualitative age related changes of different aspects of emotion processing and emotional functioning In the current Frontiers research topic we aim to present exciting new findings related to the effects of healthy aging on both more perceptually driven bottom up as well as more cognitively driven top down aspects of emotions In particular questions such as the following need to be raised and addressed What neural and behavioral processes are underlying age differences in emotion perception and memory for emotional information Are there differences between how older and younger adults experience and regulate their emotions and what drives these differences Is there a gradual reduction or more of a qualitative change of our emotional experiences over the life cycle from the turbulent childhood and youth to the mellower old age And what aspects of age related changes in emotional processing can be explained by age related changes in the brain and which are more affected by other factors such as changes in other body systems in experiential processes or in overall life goals

Engineering Education John Heywood, 2006-01-24 A synthesis of nearly 2 000 articles to help make engineers better educators While a significant body of knowledge has evolved in the field of engineering education over the years much of the published information has been restricted to scholarly journals and has not found a broad audience This publication rectifies that situation by reviewing the findings of nearly 2 000 scholarly articles to help engineers become better educators devise more effective curricula and be more effective leaders and advocates in curriculum and research development The author's first objective is to provide an illustrative review of research and development in engineering education since 1960 His second objective is with the examples given to encourage the practice of classroom assessment and research and his third objective is to promote the idea of curriculum leadership The publication is divided into four main parts Part I demonstrates how the underpinnings of education history philosophy psychology sociology determine the aims and objectives of the curriculum and the curriculum's internal structure which integrates assessment content teaching and learning Part II focuses on the curriculum itself considering such key issues as content organization trends and change A chapter on interdisciplinary and integrated study and a chapter on project and problem based models of curriculum are included Part III examines problem solving creativity and design Part IV delves into teaching assessment and evaluation beginning with a chapter on the lecture cooperative learning and teamwork The book ends with a brief insightful forecast of the future of engineering education Because this is a practical tool and reference for engineers each chapter is self contained and may be read independently of the others Unlike other works in engineering education which are generally intended for educational researchers this publication is written not only for researchers in the field of engineering education but also for all engineers who teach All readers acquire a host of practical skills and knowledge in the fields of learning philosophy sociology and history as they specifically apply to the process of engineering curriculum
