Introduction To Global Financial Markets:

An Introduction to Global Financial Markets Stephen Valdez, Philip Molyneux, 2017-09-16 This textbook provides an accessible introduction to finance and financial markets around the world. Requiring no previous knowledge of the subject, the authors comprehensively cover a broad range of different types of banking markets, foreign exchange, and derivative products. Incorporating recent events and current developments in finance, contemporary international examples are used throughout to illustrate this fast-moving subject area. With Stephen Valdez's decades of experience as a financial trainer and Philip Molyneux's academic experience, they are the perfect team for this accessible and applied textbook. This textbook is core reading for second and third year undergraduate students studying modules in financial markets and institutions as part of business and management degree courses. In addition, it is suitable for use on MBA finance courses. New to this Edition: Provides updated and expanded coverage of the global financial crisis of 2007-08 and its aftermath. Explains and contextualises the major structural and regulatory reforms of global banking and financial markets. A new design to make it more student-friendly, such as illustrative boxes that explain key financial issues.

Financial markets and institutions. A comparison of China and international financial centers Nadiia Kudriashova, 2019-04-01. Essay from the year 2017 in the subject Economics Finance, grade MA, Yale University, language English. Abstract: International Finance Centers (IFCs) are an integral part of the modern international financial economy. One of its basic components is the availability of developed national financial markets actively interacting with similar markets in other countries. As an example, the United States can lead the UK and Japan in economic development, which play an important role in the financial markets and the major cities of these countries. New York, London, and Tokyo are the major international financial centers. Cities can be seen as the gateway to the global economy. They are important for the functioning of both national and global economy since they are concentrated huge financial, informational, and intellectual resources. Based most of the major industrial, commercial, financial, and service companies, specialized credit and financial institutions, and banks. In addition to traditional MFC in the last decades of the 20th century, a number of new financial centers competing for the role of international. The acceleration of globalization and especially its financial component led to an increase in strength and influence of regional financial centers in particular, such as Hong Kong. The financial market of China, which is traditionally considered to be emerging financial markets, have long been a mature international financial center that has an impact not only on the regional economy but also in the distribution of global capital flows. The study of the functioning of the MFC, their development trends, is the most important area for the understanding of the new global economy, its characteristics, and movement mechanisms. At the same time, identifying new trends in the development of Asian financial centers, particularly their inclusion in the competition for international corporations, have mastered the financial market, is both scientific and practical interest. This makes it possible to identify local features of financial globalization as a result of the connection and the active development of the Asia Pacific Economic Space with new financial centers. Their role, prospects, and competitiveness in the global economy. Of particular importance is the study of the development of Chinese financial market especially given the fact that the IMF has recognized the yuan a freely usable currency reflecting the expanding role of China in world trade a significant increase in the use of the yuan in the international scale and the growth of operations with it
