EQ How can infrastructure investments help address the challenges and the goal of net-zero by 2050?

TW What gets funded gets done. Green infrastructure investments are the most fundamental requirement for building a green economy. Getting to a near-zero-emission economy means that we will need to spend everything and complete the decarbonization of our grid over the coming few decades. Right now, even though we are moving faster than many people thought was possible, we are not keeping up with our own commitments, and we are distributing out on action in the global economy as the low-carbon expansion gets into high gear.
