

- While only 75% of your Apex code must be covered by tests, don't focus on the percentage of code that is covered. Instead, make sure that every use case of your application is covered, including positive and negative cases, as well as bulk and single records. This approach ensures that 75% or more of your code is covered by unit tests.
- Every trigger must have some test coverage.
- All classes and triggers must compile successfully.

For more information on writing tests, see Testing Apex on page 638.

Deploying Apex to a Sandbox Organization

Sandboxes create copies of your Salesforce org in separate environments. Use them for development, testing, and training without compromising the data and applications in your production org. Sandboxes are isolated from your production org, so operations that you perform in your sandboxes don't affect your production org.

To deploy Apex from a local project in the Salesforce extension for Visual Studio Code to a Salesforce organization, see Salesforce Extensions for Visual Studio Code.

You can also use the `deploy()` Metadata API call to deploy your Apex from a developer organization to a sandbox organization.

A useful API call is `runTests()`. In a development or sandbox organization, you can run the unit tests for a specific class, a list of classes, or a namespace.

You can also use Salesforce CLI. See Develop Against Any Org for details.

For more information, see Deploying Apex.

Deploying Apex to a Salesforce Production Organization

After you have finished all of your unit tests and verified that your Apex code is executing properly, the final step is deploying Apex to your Salesforce production organization.

To deploy Apex from a local project in Visual Studio Code editor to a Salesforce organization, see Salesforce Extensions for Visual Studio Code.

Also, you can deploy Apex through change sets in the Salesforce user interface.

For more information and for additional deployment options, see Deploying Apex on page 672, and Build and Release Your App.

Adding Apex Code to a AppExchange App

You can include an Apex class or trigger in an app that you're creating for AppExchange.

Any Apex that is included as part of a package must have at least 75% cumulative test coverage. Each trigger must also have some test coverage. When you upload your package to AppExchange, all tests are run to ensure that they run without errors. In addition, tests with the `@IsTest(OnInstall=true)` annotation run when the package is installed in the installer's organization. You can specify which tests should run during package install by annotating them with `@IsTest(OnInstall=true)`. This subset of tests must pass for the package install to succeed.

For more information, see the Second-Generation Managed Packaging Developer Guide.

Apex Quick Start

This step-by-step tutorial shows how to create a simple Apex class and trigger, and how to deploy these components to a production organization.
