Opportunities in traditional fields are shrinking as the competition increases exponentially. Despite this glaring truth far too many post collegians automatically consider the most visible traditional careers usually out of confusion, uncertainty, and peer and parental pressures. Fields like law, medicine, and banking, just to name a few, are often overpopulated and thus extremely competitive for entry level positions. The Greens explain to readers the highly individualistic nature of choosing a career, the interesting choices that are frequently overlooked, and the imaginative ways in which young adults can identify their goals and take the necessary steps to realize them. The Encyclopedia of Sports Parenting Dan Doyle, 2013-08-01. For more than a decade former basketball coach Dan Doyle has been traveling the country speaking to student athletes and their parents about their involvement in and dedication to every sport imaginable. As founder and executive director of the Institute of International Sport at the University of Rhode Island, Doyle has attended his fair share of sporting events and has heard countless stories about confrontations taking place on and off the court between coaches, players, parents, and even fans. As the years passed, Doyle gathered everything he'd learned and heard and joined forces with Deborah Doermann Burch, a former schoolteacher and parenting expert, to write The Encyclopedia of Sports Parenting. Together they surveyed more than 500 successful sports figures to gain additional insight into what parents can do to guide their children through the competitive, sometimes disheartening, though oftentimes rewarding world of sports. In this book, parents will learn how to express themselves in various challenging situations, including learning that their children have been cut from teams, have become victims of team violence, hazing, or bullying, or are not receiving adequate and assumedly deserved playing time.
