

1. The first step in the process of identifying a problem is to define the problem. This involves identifying the symptoms of the problem and determining the scope of the problem.

2. The second step is to identify the causes of the problem. This involves identifying the factors that are contributing to the problem and determining the underlying causes.

3. The third step is to develop a plan of action. This involves identifying the goals of the plan and determining the steps that need to be taken to achieve those goals.

1.1 THE NATURE OF PROBLEMS

A problem is a situation or condition that is perceived as a difficulty or obstacle to be overcome. Problems can arise in a wide range of contexts, from personal life to business and industry. The nature of a problem is determined by the specific circumstances surrounding it, and the degree to which it is perceived as a challenge or obstacle.

1.1.1 Definition of a Problem 1.1.2 Types of Problems

The definition of a problem is often subjective, as it depends on the individual's perception of the situation. A problem is typically characterized by a goal that is difficult to achieve, a resource that is limited, or a constraint that is imposed. Problems can be classified into a number of different types, based on their complexity and the nature of the challenge they present.
