Congress and the People (p. 123)

In the United States the people are sovereign, but they do not take part in national government directly. They elect representatives to make and carry out laws. Article I of the Constitution gives the lawmaking power to Congress.

Representing the People Each member of Congress represents the people of a particular geographic area. The people who live within that area are called the member's constituents. One way in which a member of Congress represents the people is by representing his or her constituents.

Members of Congress must deal with the demands of organized groups of like-minded people who join together to influence government and its policies. These groups are called interest groups. Members of Congress must also keep in mind the needs of the country as a whole. Each House seat is meant to represent the same number of people. Today the total number of House seats is 435. There are also nonvoting delegates from the District of Columbia, Guam, the U.S. Virgin Islands, and
