In-service Evaluation of a Detection-control System for High-speed Signalized Intersections Karl Zimmerman, James Bonneson, 2005 Traffic engineers are often faced with operational and safety challenges at rural high speed signalized intersections Vehicle actuated control combined with multiple advance detectors is often used to improve operations and safety However this type of detection and control has not always resulted in a significant number of crashes Crashes sometimes continue to occur at high speed intersections and delays to traffic movements can be unnecessarily long An innovative detection control system was developed for the Texas Department of Transportation to minimize both delay and crash frequency at rural intersections This system was subsequently implemented at several intersections in Texas and its safety and operational benefits were evaluated This report documents the findings and conclusions reached as a result of a three year implementation project The Detection Control System was installed at each of eight intersections in Texas during the three year period Five of the intersections were suitable for a before after study of safety and operational data An evaluation of the before after data indicated that the Detection Control System was able to reduce delay by 14 percent stop frequency by 9 percent red light violations by 58 percent heavy vehicle red light violations by 80 percent and severe crash frequency by 39 percent Transportation and Traffic Engineering Handbook Wolfgang S. Homburger, 1982

Emphasizes the major elements of total transportation planning particularly as they relate to traffic engineering Updates essential facts about the vehicle the highway and the driver and all matters related to these three principal concerns of the traffic engineer Fourth International Symposium on Highway Capacity, 2000 Review and Evaluation of

Enforcement Issues and Safety Statistics Related to Red-light-running James A. Bonneson, Karl Zimmerman, Cesar A. Quiroga, 2003 The objectives of this research project are to 1 quantify the safety impact of red light running at intersections in Texas and 2 provide guidelines for identifying truly problem intersections and whether enforcement or engineering countermeasures are appropriate This report documents the findings from the first year of a two year project During the first year data were collected to quantify the character and extent of red light violations and related crashes in Texas Data were also collected to quantify the effectiveness of intersection traffic control enforcement The findings from a review of the literature on red light running and an analysis of red light running crash data are included in this report A procedure for identifying and quantifying red light running related crashes is described

Evaluation of Operational Efficiencies, Cost, and Accident Experience of Four Phase Single Point Urban Interchanges Jim C. Lee, 2002 This research compares two interchange types the Tight Urban Diamond Interchange TUDI and the Four Phase Single Point Urban Interchange 40SPUI The 40SPUI is referred to in this report as a Single Point Urban Interchange with Frontage Roads SPUI F The objectives of this research were to 1 evaluate the SPUI F based on available accident data and conflict analysis techniques right of way and construction costs and operating efficiency 2 compare the performance of the SPUI F and the TUDI 3 evaluate current SPUI F design assumptions and operation and recommend design and or operational changes to enhance performance and 4 evaluate the interchange form selection pre design process and recommend changes where appropriate The research found no significant difference in the safety aspects of the two interchange types The SPUI F generally did not perform as well operationally as the TUDI with increased SPUI F delay as the distance between frontage roads increased
