1. How does the real world of organizations as described in the textbook differ from the textbook's view of organizations? What does it change? In what ways? Do you agree?

The textbook is a very good starting point for people starting to learn about organizations. It covers a lot of ground, but it is not as detailed as you would want. It is also a bit out of date. It does not cover the latest research and trends in the field. For example, it does not cover the importance of digital technology in organizations, or the impact of globalization on organizations. Another reason the textbook's view of organizations differs from the real world is that it does not address the impact of digital technology on organizations. Digital technology has changed the way organizations operate. It has made it easier for organizations to communicate and collaborate. It has also made it easier for organizations to access information. These changes have had a significant impact on organizations. The textbook's view of organizations does not address these changes.
