CAMSHAFT COVER.

The camshaft cover is formed from the same material as the cylinder head, it contains the upper part of the camshaft bearings, the lower half being part of the cylinder head. The bearings are line bored, therefore the two are a matched pair.

Camshaft end float: 0,07 to 0,18mm. (0,003 to 0,007in.)

A steel insert in the cam cover runs in a groove machined in the camshaft, to control the camshaft end float.

The camshaft cover is located with two dowels and retained by nine bolts.

To remove the camshaft, turn the engine to the SAFE POSITION (30° BTDC), then remove the HT distributor cap, the rotor arm, the timing belt cover and the rotor arm stub shaft. Slacken the timing belt tensioner and remove the camshaft pulley. Remove the rear timing belt cover and the plate at the rear of the cam cover. Remove the camshaft cover bolts in the numbered sequence a small amount at a time to relieve valve spring tension evenly. Note the position of the long bolts and of the harness clips.

Sealing the cam cover to the cylinder head is achieved by applying a thin bead of RTV (Room Temperature Vulcanising) sealer along the entire length of the mating surfaces. Grooves adjacent to each bearing prevent sealant spreading onto the bearing surfaces; ensure the old sealant is cleared out before applying the new sealant.
