Exam Question: With the increase in computer use, many people feel that schools do not need to put the emphasis that they used to on basic handwriting skills or mental mathematics skills.

To what extent do you agree or disagree with this?

Englishan

In recent years, computer use around the world has increased drastically. As a result technological equipment is used increasingly in schools around the world. Many people question therefore whether schools should put much emphasis on teaching students basic handwriting skills and mental mathematics skills.

The use of technological equipment in lessons has increased since the onset of the digital age. Nearly all professions around the world involve computer use and even the simplest tasks are carried out via electronic equipment. Hence, it is important for students to learn how to use technology correctly for their future careers. Electronic devices also offer various learning advantages, as notes and assignments can be completed much faster and more neatly using these tools.

Nonetheless, the practical skills such as using and holding a pen correctly are likewise vital for future careers. For that reason, students have to be taught at early ages how to carry out simple tasks using basic skills, such as writing. It is also essential that a student develops neat handwriting, as in the case of a technological problem the student will have to write by hand. Furthermore, final exams are typically written by hand and thus the student must develop the basic skill of holding a pen and writing with it. Mathematics skills are no different. People will not always have a device with them to carry out calculations and the ability to do arithmetic in the head is a vital skill for operating in today's world.

In conclusion, I personally believe that schools should keep a balance between using practical skills and using electronic equipment to carry out certain tasks by having student submit assignments created electronically, yet also by having them complete assignments by hand in class and without computers or calculators. This balance is important, as if the focus lies only on one of the two aspects, the student will face problems later on in life.

study examines the use of one category of prefabricated language restricted lexical collocations in native and non native academic English in the social sciences in an attempt to throw light on a neglected aspect of learner competence It first surveys the existing theoretical viewpoints on word combinations and then reviews experimental research into the psycholinguistic processing of prefabricated language which suggest that the role of conventional expressions is to facilitate fluent production and rapid comprehension A computer based corpus of native academic writing is analysed to discover to what extent and how such collocations are used in formal written English Conventionality of style it is suggested aids precision of expression clearly a quality highly valued in academic argument A corpus of non native writing is then subjected to a similar analysis While the collocational errors learners make do not on the whole seriously destroy intelligibility they can lead to a lack of precision and obscure the clarity of expression required in academic communication Pedagogical implications are then considered and it is seen that for the most part published teaching materials have failed to recognize the nature of collocations in general and offer little help The final part of the study examines the treatment of restricted collocations in both general and phraseological dictionaries for learners These are evaluated on their selection and presentation of collocations shown by the preceding research to be problematic for advanced learners The conclusion suggests that for such learners who are mostly studying the language independently good reference works are needed in the form of specialist collocational dictionaries The results of this research help to establish principles for the design of such dictionaries
