

Chapter 10: Biology and the Environment

1. Ecosystems

Define an ecosystem and describe the components of an ecosystem.

2. Ecosystems and the environment (Energy) An energy flow diagram is shown below. Use this diagram to answer the questions.

The diagram shows the flow of energy in an ecosystem. The sun provides energy to the producers (plants). The producers transfer energy to the primary consumers (herbivores). The primary consumers transfer energy to the secondary consumers (carnivores). The secondary consumers transfer energy to the tertiary consumers (top carnivores). Energy is lost from the system at each stage through respiration and excretion. The diagram shows that energy flows from the sun to the producers, then to the primary consumers, then to the secondary consumers, and finally to the tertiary consumers. Energy is lost from the system at each stage through respiration and excretion.

3. Ecosystems and the environment (Nutrients) The diagram below shows the flow of nutrients in an ecosystem.

The diagram shows the flow of nutrients in an ecosystem. Nutrients are taken up by the producers from the soil. The producers transfer nutrients to the primary consumers. The primary consumers transfer nutrients to the secondary consumers. The secondary consumers transfer nutrients to the tertiary consumers. Nutrients are recycled in the ecosystem through the decomposition of dead organic matter. The diagram shows that nutrients are recycled in the ecosystem through the decomposition of dead organic matter.

4. Ecosystems and the environment (Stability) Describe the factors that affect the stability of an ecosystem.

The factors that affect the stability of an ecosystem are: the number of species, the complexity of the food web, the diversity of the species, and the resilience of the species. A higher number of species and a more complex food web generally lead to a more stable ecosystem. Diversity and resilience also contribute to the stability of an ecosystem.

5. Ecosystems and the environment (Human impact) Describe the human impact on ecosystems.

Human impact on ecosystems includes: deforestation, agriculture, urbanisation, and climate change. Deforestation leads to the loss of habitat and biodiversity. Agriculture leads to the loss of natural habitats and the use of pesticides and fertilisers. Urbanisation leads to the loss of natural habitats and the production of waste. Climate change leads to the warming of the planet and the melting of glaciers and ice sheets. Human impact on ecosystems is a major concern for the future of the planet.
