Diagnostic Evaluation of Articulation and Phonology (DEAP) Data Assessment - Student

The Diagnostic Evaluation of Articulation and Phonology (DEAP) is an assessment that screens for articulation errors and/or phonological disorders and/or mixed errors. This test is one of the ways which the DEAP (including the articulation and phonology subtests) is used to determine the articulation and phonology components.

The Diagnostic Screen involves collection on the single word form intelligibility to provide standardized scores and to determine if there are any articulation or phonology errors. The results of this screen can help the clinician to determine what further subtests may be needed.

The Articulation Screen tests the articulation process of sounds and placements with the articulators to determine that there are no articulation errors and that the child is producing the sounds required for the production of words.

The Intelligibility Assessment involves a series of words and the child is asked to repeat them and the ability to produce words will provide the intelligibility of the single word form.

In the Phonology Assessment, the child is presented with an evaluation of the words and corrected speech form.

Finally, the Word Repetition Assessment tests the accuracy of a copy of a word in the phonological form of the child's production.
