Mapping The Labyrinth:

Mapping the Labyrinth Stephen Murray, 2014-11-25 Delving into the heartland of rural Australia uncovering secrets of the communal mind resting at waypoints of oblique eccentric observation Love madness social engineering feline companionship mechanics of voice hearing and dissociative identity disorder all these and more challenging subjects mapped as the labyrinth of existence is traversed with bold enthusiasm by a veteran explorer Walking and Mapping Karen O'Rourke, 2016-02-12 An exploration of walking and mapping as both form and content in art projects using old and new technologies shoe leather and GPS From Guy Debord in the early 1950s to Richard Long Janet Cardiff and Esther Polak more recently contemporary artists have returned again and again to the walking motif Today the convergence of global networks online databases and new tools for mobile mapping coincides with a resurgence of interest in walking as an art form In Walking and Mapping Karen O'Rourke explores a series of walking mapping projects by contemporary artists She offers close readings of these projects many of which she was able to experience firsthand and situates them in relation to landmark works from the past half century Together they form a new entity a dynamic whole greater than the sum of its parts By alternating close study of selected projects with a broader view of their place in a bigger picture Walking and Mapping itself maps a complex phenomenon Labyrinth Louise Coysh, 2014-10-06 London's underground railways are an expression of the spread and diversity of the most international of capitals Indeed for many Londoners the subterranean network is the very essence of the city its arteries carrying the pulse of urban life from the heart of the metropolis out to its farthest extremities and beyond How to capture that breadth in one work of art How to celebrate a single system while also reflecting the millions of lives that it transports every day That was the challenge facing Turner Prize winning artist Mark Wallinger His response was to create a vast permanent work of public art across the entire network layered with rich cultural and historical references In each of the Underground's 270 stations he placed a uniquely designed labyrinth an ancient symbol representing spiritual and imaginative voyages akin to the countless circuitous journeys made on the Tube Designed by the award winning studio Rose Labyrinth A Journey Through London's Underground by Mark Wallinger is a compelling record of this extraordinary project But more than that it is also a vivid celebration of the London Underground and of London itself Striking photographs of all the labyrinths in situ reveal the diverse face and fabric of the network and its users while fascinating I never knew that facts about each station and their surrounds bring surprising perspectives to the daily commute Transport historian Christian Wolmar tells the story of the emergence and development of London's subterranean rail network and the important role it has played in shaping the metropolis and those who live in it Novelist Will Self responds to Wallinger's piece with a personal reflection that takes us into the depths of memory and through the disorientating effects of urban life while writer and academic Marina Warner in conversation with the artist explores the historical and mythological significance of the labyrinth and places the project in the context of Wallinger's practice Much more than a document of the creation of a work of art this book is also a unique portrait of a system that keeps London going the very lifeblood upon which it depends and thrives

Calvino's Fictions Kathryn Hume, 1992 Throughout the novels and stories The cosmicomical tales with their focus on science are seen as crucial to the development of the symbolic mindscapes that made Calvino a major international writer He died before arriving at any satisfactory solution to the problems of relating the I to the not I but Hume derives from his later works a philosophy based on the creation of likenesses of internal microcosms that permit us to mirror the macrocosm These interior

City Images Mary Ann Caws, 2013-11-26 First Published in 1991 Knowing any real city and still more so knowing what it is to know a city may be as much about passive as about active experience What we read in the field that field of the city in all its bizarre mixture of culture and nature is bound to determine to some non-fictional extent what we know of it what we imagine it could be what we fear it may be or become These essays are meant to be albeit in their critical mode the recountings of knowing something through something else they are the projected imagination through reading of the reading by the self and or others a wide range of each of a city or cities as such of what city knowing or city thinking is The city as stage market and labyrinth variously trafficked and aestheticized dreamt and politicized as passionately written by authors from Cicero to Kazin from Wordsworth Dickens Whitman and Woolf to Williams Ashbery and Bonnefoy is the place the essays play themselves out through architecture and metaphor
